The Scene on the Bridge

It is almost and I should be cautious with this:
but a pleasure organ
for her when it is placed in her mouth let alone

throat how it sometimes goes all the way in the place where food goes-- to consume and sustain her life I said I should be cautious and that is why you should take that less seriously what I just said and how I meant it but you should really watch her eyes I mean if you could be there of course and what it would mean to her if you were would probably not be the same so rather not and just believe me what I said and try to know what I meant

yoyo can you remember that moment in the tunnel there towards the end when we were marching proclaiming shouting throwing beer metaphors at the cop car trashing the fragile glass egos of the stage ~~x~~ and of the Poet and arra/ re-arranging the shards into the shape of a big fat dick dancing on the shards , bleeding and wearing poetry yoyo Rokman, you rolling dude? / yea you're right yoyo remember when everybody's eyes were lit when the audiences eyes got really comfortable in the discomfort of their poetic taste, disgusted at seeing the seams x of poetry, the poverty / the emotional poverty of the whole fucking enterprise, hey kids, welcome to the autopsy of ~~xx~~ poetry, keep those protective clothing on at all times, this mig t get a bit messy, so lets start we start with a lateral cut to bare the ribcage, here, through the gushing dark liquid, you can spot the white bones of poetry of the structure of poetry, rhyme schemes, conceit, patterns, Gleaming grey alliterations, --all ~~rotten to their core~~/all dusty and frail due t o neglect, next we proceed to extracting the organs, the liver all fucked up, the kidneys piss poor, the lungs clogged with soot, the arteries coagulated into thick knots of dead metaphors aorta blurry with vague ~~xx~~ neoprene phrases yoyo did you call him? yoyo Roksan told you to call him did you call him? what? you got drunk and pole danced in t e subway? wha s tha got to do with anything hey hey don't touch that, that's můj tabák yo Jaromír, can you get your fat ass off of my couch and write the freakin press release? I know I'm just paying you in Portuguese love poetry but this needs to get done? what? fuck you why I pole danced in the subway, get to work, bitch

— yoyo did ^{ella} somebody ~~told~~ the performes that we can't really afford to pay pay them and that we will actually have to ask them to contribute whatever they can since Sandra got a fine for pole dancing in the metro —

I want the president to go to war and be in

Pistachio Tosser Remains at Large (NORTH ŽIŽKOV) Recent reports indicate that the famous pistachio shell tosser remains at large. Residents can anticipate that miscellaneous pistachio shells may appear on your floor if you sleep with your window open.

The first report of such an incident came in from Honza Novak who wrote to Krotch editors last week with excitement, "the shell tosser is still at it", he exclaimed, "I finally got a pistachio shell thrown threw my window."

This is a developing story, and shell forecasts will be published regularly.

Poet Dies on Stage

(NOVÉ MESTO) Over the weekend the poet was found dead after reciting his latest academic iteration of language. The event occurred at the cafe where a crowd of the other poets in their late 70s gathered at 15:00 in the evening.

Once the reading was over at 19:00, the bar clean-up crew noticed that the poet had been unconscious for several hours and was no longer reading in iambic.

"Why hadn't anyone called the paramedics?" asked a local language user Veronika Pudlákova.

When Krotch editors reached out to attendees of the event, responses were varied from "I thought that was part of the performance"... to "I slept through the whole thing and didn't notice—sorry?"

This is the second incident this month where a tragedy occurred at a poetry recital and attendees were unfazed by what was happening.

One respondent, however, asked "Why do poetry readings have to be so boring? There has to be a way to prevent this."

Farting Neighbor Prompts Mass Move-out

(FLORA) A mass move-out has begun on the outskirts of Vinohrady due to a loud farting neighbor. Residents are seeking answers as to why no one stepped in before.

Reports came in Monday afternoon about noises from next door of local Flora resident Marek Svoboda, "At first it was anger now it's disbelief—someone has to document this. I just don't have the right sound gear right now."

On Tuesday our editors confirmed that the walls in the building were indeed made on concrete and the neighbor has a real talent.

The mass-moveout is planned for next Tuesday where a professional sound crew will replace residents to document the spectacle. The crew will be submitting the captured audio to the Ministry of Culture for a small cut of 6,000,000czk of their yearly budget.

THE CRITICS

1. You have food poisoning and are near to death / actively protesting the establishment / would not give to a dog / demanding a refund and sincere apology / borderline criminal.
2. You feel sick but haven't vomited / garbage food / inedible / you demand a refund but recognize you should have known better / wouldn't take your Brno friends there.
3. You understand the concept of the food / a few things are off: cold, burnt, hair (perhaps all at once) / can't or won't finish / asking for a discount / write a bad review online / might tell people about it at the Sunday jam when asked how your week was.
4. Edible—good job, it was only 100czk anyways / you'll finish it because you're hungry / dissatisfying but nothing to complain about / won't try again (even on a Thursday).
5. Just fine - might try again / would eat when drunk but not like 5 beers drunk but like 9 / wouldn't travel further than one tram stop.
6. would eat a couple times a month / Consistently satisfactory / Would leave a 10% tip if it's under 250czk.
7. Would travel up to three tram stops / would recommend if asked / your go-to every other week meal / 10% tip always / and anyways that guy who looks like Lou Reed might be working there tonight.
8. You consider taking a photo to send to your mom but don't / travel up to 30min with one connection / you research the recipe online and read other good reviews of the restaurant / you take your ex-girlfriend from Berlin there / they give you free water.
9. You consider vlogging about it / you take the tram, the metro, and then a buss for an hour for the damn thing / sending a photo to mom and dad / would wait in line and smoke one and be happy about it / memorable / no dissatisfaction / misperceptions compliment the dish.
10. once in a lifetime death bed meal.
